TUNIS (AP) - Mohammad Sherif Messaadia, chief administrator n Algeria's ruling National Liberation Front, arrived in Tunis Monday for discussions on a possible Tunisian-Saudi Arabian mediation in the Western Sahara conflict between Algeria and Morocco. Messaadia, Western Sahara conflict between Algeria and Morocco. Messaadia, widely regarded as number two in the Algerian government, conferred on the issue in Algers Sunday with President Chadli Benjedid. Messaadia arrived in Tunis on the eve of a state visit by Manritanian President Maaourya Ould Sid'ahmed Taya. Tunisian President Zine Al Abidine Ibn Ali returned Friday from a visit to Saudi Arabia where he told reporters that he and Saudi Arabia's King Fahd were considering a possible joint mediation to end in the 13-year-old guerrilla war in the Western Sahara. Algeria and Morocco have no diplomatic relations and have repeatedly verged on outright war since 1975 because of Algerian support for the Polisario independence movement in the Moroccan-annexed Western Sahara. According to seasoned analysts, both Egypt and Jordan are seeking to avoid an outright rejection of the proposals by any party, particularly that Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir has turned them down.

In the analysts' view, Jordan and Egypt fear that if the Arah governments turned out to be rejectionist parties" the U.S. might drop its endorsement of the international conference and, worse, its active reengage-

Community colleges: serving Jordan's socioeconomic needs

OVER the years, in coping with the double-edged challenge of limited resources and a dramatic increase in population, Jordan has lnoked to education as the key force in advancing its socioeconomic growth. This has mean not only building more and better schools, but also setting the appropriate national education gnals. As important as filling immediate educational needs has been the kind of long-term planning needed to enhance the country's future productivity pros-

Since the early sixties, when Jordan launched the first of its comprehensive development plans, the primary economic goal has been to increase the country's industrial, commercial and services potential and thus create more jobs for more people. With equal emphasis, it has been concentrating on training a qualified work force to fill those jobs.

Every year, as more and more young Jordanians reach employment age, the scope and purpose of their schooling increasingly determines the career opportunities open to them. To enhance their prospects, the government has been focusing in recent years on what could be called "directional education" — or education to fill labour market needs.

In the four decades of Jordan's young nationbood, three major phases of change in its social and economic eovironment have drastically affected its labour market and, in turn, called for new shifts in educational options. The initial problem of widespread illiteracy was resolved with the establishment of a nationwide public school system and the introduction of free compulsory education, which has since resulted io the present literacy rate of over 70 per cent — one of the highest in the region. Successive changes in Jordan's demography and socioeconomic needs, however, have directed its educational planning far beyond this basic

In 1948, upon the creation of the state of Israel, Jordan was faced with the enormous responsibility of caring for the multitude of Palestinian refugees that resulted. The sudden upheaval of an entire population, deprived of its land and means of livelihood, created an unemployment crisis that severely strained Jordan's economic resources for years.

In 1967, just when conditions had improved and the future held high promise, another Arab-Israeli war forced another wave of hundreds of thousands of new refugees into Jordan. Moreover, Israel's military occupation of the certain skills were still in short disastrous blow to Jordan's economy. Again, the critical issue was how to provide services especially basic education - and also create jobs for the increased population. For many, the only solution was to seek work elsewhere, which led to a mass emigration of skilled Jordanians and Palestinians to the Arabian Gulf states, as well as to Europe and the Americas.

The educational preference at the time lay strictly in academic studies. Secondary school graduates all had one ambition: to pursue a higher academic education. A college degree was both socially prestiginus and economi-cally valuable — it qualified one for positions in government or in the private services sector, where most of the job opportuoities

The oil boom

A second significant shift in Jordan's socioecocomic cooditions was brought on by the re-gional oil boom of the early seventies, which vitalised the economy and increased the inflow of Arab aid and Jordanian expatriate monies. During this period, the government initiated a number of major development projects, but their implementation often was hampered by a labour shortage in crucial areas. To solve the problem, foreigo construction, agricultural and industrial workers were imported. Measures also were taken to minimise furtber emigratioo of skilled Reassessing its educational priorities in light of these and future requirements, the governmentt began expanding its vocational and technical training programmes. With the increase in attractive job opportunities, the demand for this type of educatioo had begun to rise. During the decade, dozens of new centres, offering training in a number of vocational specialisations, were established in various regions of the country by the Ministry of education and the Vocational Training Corporation (an independent agency formed in 1976 to develop skilled technical cadres for industry in close association with the ministry of Labour).

A third turning point in Jordan's economy occurred io 1983, under the impact of the world recession and the concurrent reduction in Gulf oil revenues. The extended Iran-Iraq conflict also has had its adverse effect - Iraq. one of Jordan's major customers, had to curtail its nonessential imports. Although the overall labour shortage began to subside. West Bank dealt an immediate supply and continued to depend Electronics.

largely on foreign workers. In the corps of professionals, bowever, unemployment began to surface particularly among engineers, doctors and teachers. New university graduates found themselves competing for choice jobs with the well-experienced Jorda-nians who were beginning to return from the Gulf.

Foresbadowing aggravated em-ployment problems in the future s the fact that a third of Jordan's population is in school; and, despite current realities, most are receiving a purely academic education. Most Jordanian parents still want a traditional university education for their children - the higher the better. Jordan's three universities, however, are able to accommodate only a small percentage of the aspirants and many families bave been seeding their sons and daughters to universities abroad.

The birth of community

The only other academic alternative io Jordan - its teacher training institutes - were already producing more teachers tban Jordan or eveo its Arab neighbours could absorb. Obviously, an essential elemeot in any long-term solution lay in education reform. In the late seventies, responding to King Hussein's directive to "reorient our educational objectives to meet the individual needs of our citizens and those of the community," the Ministry of Education began looking into the community college concept as a way to accommodate both the public demand for higher education and the national need for more skilled technical manpower. The idea was to provide more vocationallyoriented studies beyond the secondary school level.

In 1980, the Ministry of Education converted its teacher training institutes into two-year community colleges. This introduced the framework for a programme of job-oriented higher education that would be realised with the participatinn of private colleges and the government's training institutes. In the same year, the Council of Higher Education was formed to act, in coordination with Jordan's three autonomous universities, as the policy-making arm of the government's effort to channel students into more varied types of educacoo. Theo in April 1985, a separate Mioistry of Higher Education was created, which assumed both the responsibilities of the Council and those of the Ministry of Education previously related to the administration of the community college Designed to produce the specialists required for Jordao's tecbnological development, the colleges are also expected to decentralise education, expand study options and increase higher education opportunities in Jordan. They are also intended to provide an out-reach programme of courses in languages, office skills and other subjects to the general public.

In the fall of 1980, 10 teacher training institutes and 10 private or other government institutes were tranformed into Jordan's first two-year community colleges, with a total enrollment of approximately 17,000 studeots. The institutions offer nationally recognised "associate degrees," which also qualify students for Karak, Shobak (agricultural), transfer to university level. A national community college examination was initiated in 1981 and is administered by the Ministry of Higher Education at the completion of all subject programmes. It bas proven a useful tool in assessing students, staff and resources at diverse institutions administered by different authorities and in establishing a uniform standard for all community colleges. One of the Council's first tasks was to cooduct research on Jordan's development needs and labour market and define the objectives of an overall higher education policy. Working close-ly with the Ministry of Education and other concerned bodies, the Council drew up a detailed set of by-laws for an overall community college policy, including specific requirements for the licensing, accreditation and regulation of such institutions in Jordan. Formation of the Ministry of Higher Educatioo, bowever, bas required revisioo in administrative planning and changes in law to reflect shifted responsibilities. Currently, Jordan has 53 licensed community colleges administered by over 30 different agencies, all operating under the regulatory authority of the Ministry of Higher Education. The Ministry of Education still runs two colleges, while the Ministry of Higher Education administers 10. These are located in Salt, Irbid, Ajloun, Huwwara, Zarqa, Marga and Al-Hiso (polytechnics), and Amman (tbree colleges, one of which is for women only, and another for botel training specifically). Most of these still offer teacher training along with the newer professional specialisations. Another 17 colleges are administered by other government ministries and departments, each offering highly specialised studies in fields such as telecommunications, social work, religious guidance, aviation, cartography, statistics, cooperative sciences, fi-nance and health. For traioing in medical skills, the Ministry of Health has two paramedical institutes (in Amman and Irbid), while additional nursing, midwifery and health technology programmes are offered by colleges in Karak and Zarqa.

Private colleges too

Two UNRWA colleges, one for men and one for women, provide teacher training and other professional studies to Palestinian refugee students in the Amman area. Twenty-two other community colleges, operated by private groups, vary widely in size and the number of programmes offered. More than half of these are conceotrated in Amman, with the remainder in Zarqa, Jerash and Irbid. While a few of the colleges are exclusively for women and others specialise in single subject areas - computer sciences, for example — the majority provide a fairly broad range of programmes in a coeducational setting.

The community colleges, as a whole, offer nearly 100 different specialisations in nine major procommerce, computers, communications and transport, engineering, paramedical technolo- educational planning. gies, agriculture, hotel management and social professions (such as library science, law, journalism, social work).

than 32,000 students enrolled concept has caught on. Each year sees more young Jordanians tak-ing advantage of the community college option. The emph. sis on applied skills combined with academic study also bas attracted students from other Arab states and foreign countries. Instruction in the Arabic language along with English, as well as the Arab cultural environment, has made Jordan's colleges a practical and less expensive alternative to study outside the region for some 1,400 other Arab students currently enrolled. Increasingly, Jordan is gaining importance as a respected regional centre for specialised professional studies.

Employment secured

On the employment front, Jordan's community college graduates seem to be meeting with success. Many go oo to work io family-owned enterprises; others find jobs in industry, business or in government offices by virtue of their acquired skills. A 1984 employement study indicated that community college graduates are in high demand in many fields, among them office work, computer operation, cartography, statistics and industrial maintenance. Similarly, the Jordan Medical Council anoounced a critical need for specialists at various levels in nursing, physiotherapy and pub-lic and industrial health.

Last year, the Ministry of Education introduced a student career guidance programme in selected secondary schools, to be extended to all schools by 1990. The programmme seeks to acquaint students with the realities of Jordan's economic and employment situation, while exposing them to the wider range of study opportunities and careers now available in the country. The importance of parental guidance in study/career choices is also being addressed via mass media.

Plaos for the future of vocational/technical education in Jordan at all levels will be geared to the results of research being carfessional categories: Education, ried out now to arrive at a better integration of economic and labour market projections with

Meanwhile, government construction of public education facilities, assisted by Arab and foreign grants and loans, reflects a By 1983/84, there were more strong emphasis on community colleges and vocational training throughout the system, and the at various levels. Due for completion soon are five comprehensive schools, an industrial school, six community colleges and four vocational schools. Other projects to be implemented over the oext three years will provide 18 new vocational schools, as well as the expansion and improvement of labs, libraries and workshops at existing facilities.

In 1984, when the Council of Higher Education issued its guidelines for the future development of community colleges, it called generally for a much higher proportion of practical inb preparatinn in all types of college study, a greater emphasis on developing the English and Arabic language skills of students, and an expanded community out-reach programme. Continually seeking to improve the scope and standards of the colleges. Jordanian educators stress that the system is under constant review and assessment. There is no question that Jordan's community college system is already contributing to the social and economic development of the country. What remaios 10 be seen is how research results. as well as administrative and legal changes, will affect the ultimate character of these institutions and their relationship to other educational institutions and to the labour market in Jordan.

Underlying all future decisions will be the delicate task of achieving a balance between the potentially conflicting priorities of the public demand for higher education and the national need for a stronger commitment to technical and vocational training at many levels. Educators must actively promote the fact that community colleges are able to provide a high quality of education with professional and social rewards. And graduates must be assured that their contributions to society are of value and will be viewed with respect - both in the workplace and in society.

Thus, the future growth of community colleges in Jordan rests as much on changing perceptions and social attitudes as it does upon providing more and better facilities and programmes. In this sense, Jordan's ongoing experience in "democraofficial calls them - has involved the community at large in the discussion of a broad range of social, political and economic issues. In so doing, it has given wider meaning to its original pur-

Marriott leads the way in staff training

"MARRIOTT'S business philosophy is to take care of our employees, keep them happy and content with their job and they in turn will take care of the customers," said Mr. Bill Marriott, chairman and chief executive of the Marriott Corporation in a recent interview with Business Life magazine. This thinking has existed since Bill Marriott's father founded the company over 60 years ago. Today Marriott Hotels and Resorts have over 175 luxury hotels throughout the world.

Great attention is paid to training programmes for staff as these not only develop and enhance skills hut maintain a high level of motivation. Marriott has a policy of recruiting staff locally but with promotion from within the company so greatly encouraged, staff are often transferred to overseas hotels in further their careers.

This policy has been particularly evident at the Amman Marriott Hotel where to gain increased experience, several Jordanian employees have been transferred all over the Marriott network. According to Mr. Haile Aguilar, general manager of the Amman Marriott Hotel, employees have been transferred from Amman to Boston, El Paso Texas, Irvine California, Torrance California, Tampa Florida, London, Jeddah, New York and New Jersey.

Mrs. Asma Ma'ani, the director of Human Resources at the Amman Marriott Hotel puts this policy of continued training and promotion from within as the reason of Marriott's continued success. Mrs. Ma'ani gave the following examples of some of Amman's transferred employees: Mr. Ihrahim Barghout has been transferred to Irvine California where he is working as catering mana-ger. Our former director of Human Resources, Mr. Hasif Hijazi, was transferred to El Paso as their new director of Human Resources. Miss Abeer Nashashibi is now working in the Torrance Marriott as the restaurant manager. Mrs. Ma'ani also stated "We at the Marriott are proud of our employees and pleased to know that they are doing a fine joh in their new locations." Mr. Aguilar explained that the reason for transferring employees is to strengthen our Jordanian staff. "Currently the percentage of Jordanian employees in nur hotel exceeds our goal of 80%." When asked for his plans for future transfers, Mr. Aguilar replied "We have several candidates; with more candidates and more permits will give us the chance to send more Jordanians to work abroad."

Dudin receive Finnish delegation

AMMAN (Petra) — A delega-tion representing the Finnish Pas-sikivi Council Monday met with Minister of Information Hani Khasawneh for a discussion on means of developing Finnish-Inrdanian relatinns.

The minister referred to His Majesty King Hussein's visit to Finland and said that its positive outcome was instrumental in expanding cooperation between the two countries in all fields.

"Jordan is keen on further promoting hilateral ties," the

The 43-member delegation also Monday met with Minister of Occupied Territories Affairs Marwan Dudin and reviewed with him the situation in the Israeli-occupied Arah territory.

Dudin outlined Jordan's assist ance to the West Bank and the Gaza Strip to help the Palestinians in their economic and social projects, and maintain their steadfastness in the face of Israel's pressures on them to abandon their homeland.

Dudin also referred to Jordan's coordination of efforts with the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine refugees (UNRWA) in providing essential services to the refugees on the East Bank of Jordan.

Referring to the current situation in the occupied territories, the minister said the Palestinian uprising there was a clear expression of the Arah population of their rejection of continued occupation and Israel's inhuman practices and pressures. The uprising be added was natural reaction for the long years of suffering

PSD chief visits Karak

KARAK (Petra) — Public Security Department (PSD) Director Lieutenant-General Abdul Hadi Majali Monday paid a visit to Karak, in southern Jordan, and announced that the PSD will soon embark on building four security centres in Karak, Qasr, Mazar and Qatraneh.

Apart from providing security services, these centres will also renew licences for vehicles and motorists, take charge of foreign nationals' affairs, and carry ont other duties essential for the local community, Majali said during a meeting with Karak Governor Mohammad Shohaki.

Majali hoped that these centres will be operational by the end of 1988, but added that there will be mobile security centres that will be roving remote regions in the sonth to serve local population settlements.

Also Monday, Majali made in-spection tours of police stations in the Karak governorate.

Majali later visited Mu'ta University where he delivered a lecture on the concept of comprebensive security which, be said, involves the local community's cooperation with the police to maintain peace and security.

In his lecture, Majali also spoke about the general duties of the police departments and their relationship with the local courts, such as police courts, the court of appeal and the criminal courts.

Ministry plans to modernise post offices

AMMAN (Petra) — The Ministry of Transport and Telecommunications is currently planning to increase the existing 1,000 post office boxes in the Kingdom in view of the constant demand.

The ministry is carrying out modernisation schemes on 207 post offices and office branches in different provinces, Minister of Transport and Telecommunications Khaled Al Haj Hassan announced here Monday.

He said that the country now has a total of 791 post offices and post office hranches in different towns and villages, at the rate of one centre for every 3,700 persons, a proportion rarely found in the Developing World.

The minister noted that a new central post office for the Kingdom is being constructed now to further boost postal services, and the ministry is also carrying out an ambitinus project for promoting postal services in the rural regions of the Kingdom.

Khasawneh, Queen reviews reports on improving health conditions in Jordan Valley

AMMAN (Petra) — Her Majesty Queen Noor Monday chaired a meeting to review reports by two separate committees on improving health conditions and promoting tourism in the Jordan Valley region.

One of the committees submitted proposals nn means of dealing with mosquitns, flies and nther insects, proper use of fertilisers and the disposal of plastic products and sheets after being used for agricultural purposes.

The committee recommended that a pian be wnrked out for constant spraying of different regions with inserticides, that far-mers and owners of agricultural land huild sanitary facilities for the approximately 120,000 workers employed on their lands, and that these farmers open large holes in the ground for the collection and treatment of manure as a temporary measure until a specialist is provided tn advise on their treatment.

The committee also presented proposals for the treatment nf plastic substances and said those ought to be collected in a number of areas so that a local company can collect them, and thus avoid their negative effect on agricultural land.

Health ministry to participate in documentary film festival in Bulgaria

AMMAN (Petra) — The Health Ministry will take part in an international documentary film festival to be held next year in Varna, Bulgaria, to project its endeavours to spread awareness among the public in health re-lated affairs, Health Minister Zaid Hamzeh said here Monday.

The minister, who was speaking at a meeting with a visiting delegation representing the Bulgarian Red Cross Society (BRCS), said that the Health Ministry will provide documentaries and pamphlets and other illustrations to project its efforts in the Kingdom. The head of the delegation

Kiril Ignatov extended a formal invitation to Hamzeh to visit Bulgaria and attend the international He also discussed health cooperation between Bulgaria and Jordan. The meeting was also attended by Jordan National Red Crescent Society (JNRCS) President Ahmad Ahu Qoura.

Later, the delegation, accompanied by Ahu Qoura, visited Salt and inspected JNRCS operations and activities in the city and the Balga Governorate. They visited the Prince Abdullah Orphanage and the nursery school run hy the society, and met with local officials. The delegation visited the Madaba district to inspect the JNRCS activities there.

In a statement to the Jordan News Agency, Petra, Ignatov paid tribute to efforts made by Jordan at all levels to achieve a lasting peace in the Middle East.

He said that the Bulgarian people support the just struggle of the Palestinian people, to regain their rights and lands, and condemn the Israeli repressive measures against the Palestinian people. Ignatov also paid tribute to Jordanian-Bulgarian cooperation in humanitarian services.

The minister said in a statement to the Jordan News Agency following a meeting of the ministry's Planning Committee that he heard a report on the health situation in the occupied West Bank and the hospitals' needs.

The minister said he will call on the Arah Health Ministers Councils, which will convene in Amman in the coming month, to provide financial help to enable the West Bank hospitals acquire amhulances and other equip that can promote their work and operations specially under the present difficult circumstances. The minister on Saturday was quoted as saying that contacts and consultations with different concerned parties were underway for purchasing a 50-dunum piece of land at Beit Hanina, in the outskirts of Arah Jerusalem, for setting up an Arab hospital.

Hamzeh said that the hospital will provide medical services to the local Arab population in the Jerusalem area, who were forced to seek such services at Israeli hospitals after the authorities closed down the Hospice Hospital three years ago.

Bedroom Farce opens Wednesday

AMMAN - Bedroom Farce, a comedy written hy renowned British playwrite Alan Ayckhourne and grouping eight famous actors, many of whom are well-known to millions of cinema and television viewers worldwide, opens Wednesday at the Jordan Inter-Continental Hotel.

Dubbed hy world drama critics as "A wickedly funny play" Ayckbourne nffers audiences a comic wizardy filled with frustrations of everyday life, late telephone calls, and ill-fitting coats, as he continues with his known themes of explniting the hang-ups and social self-consciousness of middle-class families hy invading another of their personal territories — their bedrooms.

With a four-couple cast covering various social moods; a sedate and middle aged couple recapturing their youthful abandon by cosily eating tinned pilchards in bed; another pair, a bed-ridder bad-tempered executive and his efficient wife; the third, a young party-giving couple; and the fourth, a quarrelsnme and marauding couple.

British comedian-turned-producer Derek Nimmo, the man behind getting this show started. will allow theatre lovers here to be entertained by three big stars: Barry Evans, whose global recognition came from his role as teacher of English in the TV series Mind Ynnr Language, Joan Sims, known for her many outrageous characterisations in the series of films Carry On and Peter Jones, recognised through his successful series, Begger My Neighbour.

The other five-glittering cast tor Hugh Goldie, are: Richard Denning, who starred in London's famous West-End Musical Me And My Girl, Judie Maynard, reputed for her role in the series Angels, and her star-members in this play, which was steered hy veteran British direction and Primi Townsend.

The five-day performance event is organised by the hotel in cooperation with British Airways playhouse group which has been staging dinner theatre plays at the ring together with Michael Caine hotel since 1985, when these in the film, Half Monn Street, annual seasons first started.

Breaking the chains

THE European Parliament's rejection of trade accords already negntiated with Israel is a significant event in the history of the Arab-Israeli conflict, in that it has shown that the European Community (EC) has managed to break nut the shackles of the "guilty ennscience" imposed nn it hy Nazi actions during World War 11. It has always been a weapon that Israel never besitated in use in have its way with the Europeans. But now it appears that the Zinnist state has indeed overused it. Equally significant in the Europarliament's move is the fact that the EC is closely following up nn its new-found will to adopt a stand of its nwn, after years of siding with Israel and leaving the U.S. to mnnnpolise efforts to settle the Arab-Israeli conflict. The chain of the changing trend in EC thinking was set nff with the 1980 Venice Declaration of the community, produced the courageous Brussels Declaration of February 1987, was follawed by harsh criticism of Israel's building settlements in the occupied West Bank and Gaza, and culminated in last week's npen candemnation of Israel's brutal handling of the Palestinian uprising in the occupied territories. Throughout this period. it was clear that a decade after the 1973 Arab nil embargn, the Europeans were gradually putting things in the right perspective, and accepting the fact that relations with the Arah Wnrid could not be limited to trade relations and issues related tn protecting nil interests.

Predictably, Israel has raised a cry nver last week's EC decision, saying condemnation of its practices against the Palestinians did not "reflect truth and reality."

The Europarliament's emphatic reminder to Israel that it can nn langer hope to get way with murder — quite literally of course — is a freshening thought for the Arabs, who for decades have been trying to convince the Europeans of the dangers inherent in leaving the Palestinian problem unaddressed. While commending the Europarliament for its principled decision, we also hape it would show the same firm determinatinn and assume the appropriate role that Europe should play, away from the influence of its friends across the Atlantic, and spearhead the quest for a just and comprehensive settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

ARABIC PRESS EDITORIALS

Al Ra'i: King praises uprising

KING Hussein in a meeting with a Finnish delegation paid tribute to the Palestinian uprising in the occupied Arab territory which he said is daringly and bravely confronting Israel's expansionist plans. The King said that the continuation of Israeli occupation of Arab territory and the oppression being exercised against the Arab people have brought about this uprising. It is time he said, that the world community found a proper measure for ending this occupation and helping the Palestinians to regain their lands and rights. The need is now great for holding an international conference under U.N. auspices to find a just and durable solution for the Arab-Israeli conflict which can ensure peace in the Middle East. The King's words were echoed by Prime Minister Zaid Rifai who spoke to the delegation about the problem and about the need for a lasting settlement. The King said that Israel has been ignoring the idea of this conference and refusing to recognise the PLO as the legitimate representative of the Palestinians. But the uprising came to abort Israel's plans and to force it to consent to the will of the international

Al Dustour: Israeli distortion

AS the uprising in the occupied territories continues to gain ground and win support world-wide, certain suspect circles chose to fish in muddy waters and to distort the pure and clear image of the Palestinian struggle. These sources have used an alleged statement issued by the Unified National Leadership of the Uprising, calling on the Palestinian members of Parliament to resign their posts which of course constitutes a serious danger to the unity and the united struggle of the people on both sides of the River Jordan. But the clarification given by the PLO and the genuine contents of the statement issued on the West Bank have underlined once again the pure image of the uprising and reasserted the sound course of the struggle against the Israeli invaders. The clarification also reaffirmed the national unity within the united family on the two banks of the river and proved that the national leadership is only concerned with ending occupation and adhering to the national unity between the two banks. King Hussein is confident that the Palestinian people can deal with such suspect sources and remove all elements of evil that mar the uprising and end all such suspect moves that only serve the Israeli enemy.

Sawt Al Shaab: An Israeli conspiracy

IT is good that the official Jordanian spokesman clarified the ambiguity behind a statement issued by the Unified National Leadership of the Uprising. The clarification made it clear to the people on both sides of the River Jordan that there exist certain suspect circles that aim to distort the uprising of the Palestinian people and thwart the noble cause of ending Israeli occupation and terrorism. No doubt the distorted statement had aimed to serve Israel which has been embarrassed on the domestic and external fronts because of its continued atrocities against the Arab people and its oppressive measures against the civilians. The clarification of the statement's contents underlined the importance of the national Jordanian unity, and also made it clear that Jordan was exercising a leading role towards ending the occupation and establishing peace. It is at this crucial time that Israel perpetrated a new conspiracy aimed at causing splits within the people of the united country on both banks of the river.

The remarkable feat of George P. Shultz

By Donald Neff

ANYONE harbouring a glimmer of optimism that the Reagan administration is going to go all out to find a solution to the Arah-Israeli conflict in its last 11 months in office is probably in for a disappointment. The record doesn't lend itself to a happy prognostication. It is this administration that in the past seven years has turned America's relationship with Israel into one of the strangest and closest in history. This remarkable feat is largely the work of Secretary of Sate George P. Shultz and it is sobering to examine how and why Shultz was no newcomer to Washington when he became secretary of state in mid-1982. He came with a glowing reputation, partly based on the convoluted fact that Richard Nixon didn't like him. Nixon had once called Shultz a "candy ass" when he was secretary of the treasury and the president wanted Shultz illegally to harass some of his Watergate enemies. Shultz refused, thus earning Nixon's epithet and the respect of many admirers. The amusing thing to Washington's power structure was that far from being a candy ass. Shultz had a uger tattoo back there. He got the tattoo during a burst of enthusiasm while a member of the Princeton football team - The Tigers - and Shultz the tiger was expected to do some quiet roaring in his new job.

"Within his first nine months [as secretary of state! Shultz shocked Israel with his tough actions."

Retween his Washington stints, he had been president of the mammoth Bechtel Group Inc., the worldwide construction and engineering firm that had more than a few interests in Arab lands. Shultz, it was confidently predicted, could be counted upon to straighten out the grotesque pro-Israel policies of his predecessor, Alexander Haig. At first, Shultz appeared to be doing just that hy acting with feline ferocity in the Middle East. Within his first nine months, he shocked Israel and its supporters with his tough actions. He twice threatened Arms Export Control Act sanctions against Israel for its illegal use of American weapons, and presided over President Reagan's 1982 peace plan despite ehement Israeh opposition.

For all this assertive statesmanship, Shultz began to be treated as though be had mange. He and his president began getting some of the worst press notices since Jimmy Carter said the Palestinians deserved a "bomeland." By the late winter and spring of 1983, Time magazine was writing about the "Vacuum at State" and the Washington Post somehow concluded — despite all of Shultz's forceful actions against Israel — that "there is a growing body of thought that Shultz may be too quiet, that he may not be forceful enough." Israel's ambassor, Moshe Arens, complained to the New York Times that relations between the United States and Israel had worsened to a disastrous level. He said the "frustration and impatience and anger" in the relationship was perhaps the worst in history. Thus the man who had been widely hailed on his selection as secretary of state for his unruffled composure and his evenhanded view of the Middle East, the man who had headed one of the most powerful corporations in the world and had been the secretary of both the labour and treasury departments as well as director of the office of management and hudget, was countries that was unprecedented only nine months later being pil-loried as an incompetent. What many news reports failed to mention was that underlying the drombeat of criticism was a chorus of complaints that Shultz didn't recognise who America's real friends were. Decoded from the patois of America's domestic politics, that meant Shultz was being too harsh on Israel. Shultz. obviously no fool, quickly began to see the light, reportedly with the help of Undersecretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger, a former protege of Kissinger. Eaglebnrger's message to the beleaguered Shultz in the summer of 1983 was, in concentrated form, no less than this: He must either embrace the Israelis or spend all his time fighting them. The record is clear what Shnltz's Faustian choice was. There soon followed what Israel's supporters began calling admiringly a "revolution" in U.S. policy. Before 1983 was out (a year before the next presidential election, it might be noted), President Reagan signed on 29 October the top secret National Security Decision Directive 111. This seminal directive fundamentally and officially redefined U.S. goals in the Middle East. It called for strategic cooperation with Israel, the same country that during the past year Washington had criticised for its barbaric actions in Lebanon. The new policy resulted within a month in formalising the relationship with the signing on 29 November of a Memorandum of Understanding strategic cooperation between the United States and Israel, 1ts putative purpose was to "enhance United States-Israeli cooperation" and to guard against "the threat to our mutual interests posed by increased Soviet involvement in the Middle East." In fact, what this policy accomplished was the initiation of the greatest transfer of money and technology ever freely surrendered by one country to another. Under the strategic alliance, the U.S. and Israel established joint military and political committees. funding (to the tune of $1.5 hillion) was provided for Israel's ill-starred Lavi fighter, joint military exercises were held, stockpiling of U.S. military equipment in Israet was sanctioned, more extensive sharing of intelligence was agreed to, use of Israeli ports to service ships of the U.S. Sixth Fleet was provided, Israel was granted the precious status of a non-Nato ally and a unique free trade zone was opened to give Israel duty free access to U.S. markets.

By 1986, this embrace by Shultz, and obviously by President Reagan, had resulted in an alliance between the twn disparate in America's experience. The closeness of the unique relationship was best described by Thomas Dine, the executive director of the American Israel Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC), the official Israeli lobby in America. At the group's 27th annual policy conference in 1986, Dine reported that relations had never been better between the United States and Israel. In the process of this development, he reported, "a whole new constituency of support for Israel is being huilt in precisely the area where we are weakest — among government officials in the state, defence and treasury departments, in the CIA, in science, trade, agricul-ture and other agencies." Israel, Dine added, is now treated by the United States as an "ally, not just a friend, an asset, rather than a liability, a mature and capable partner, not some vassal state." He added that Reagan and Shultz were going to "leave a legacy that will be important to Israel's security for decades to come.' Shultz, he said, had vowed to him to "huild institutional arrangements so that eight years from now, if there is a secretary of Israel, he will not be able to overcome the bureaucratic relationship between Israel and the U.S. that we have established." "Shultz, obviously no

state who is not positive about

That Shultz keep his word was obvious from Dine's report to the next AIPAC meeting in 1987. He told AIPAC members that "there is wide agreement that Ronald Reagan is among the best friends of Israel ever to sit in the Oval Office, and that George Shultz has been a friend beyond words as secretary of state... these stalwarts have truly transformed U.S. policy over the past five years, raising the relationship to a new level." Dine reported that despite a year in which there was the Pollard spy scandal, Israel's entanglement in the Iran/Contra scandal, 1srael's selling of weapons to South Africa, unease about Israel's nuclear policy and leadership confusion in Israel, "we have had one of the best years on record in terms of concrete legislation, in the strategic relationship between our country and Israel, and in the gains scored by our cause in the results of the 1986 elections." Dine noted that from 1983, when Israel's sale of goods and services to the department of defence equalled $9 million, such sales had reached in 1986 $205 million. As for Conis not an understatement to say achievements have been spec tacular. He did not have to mention that hy this time Israel was routinely receiving $3 billion a year in U.S. aid, all of it in the form of an outright grant, mas-sive transfers of U.S. technology, hy which Israel profitably became a leader in the world arms market, and America's unreserved diplomatic support in the United Nations, which included the routine use of America's once rare veto to protect Israel from international condemnation for its various offences against world order. Ane would like to dismiss Dine's thinks as the asual braggadocio of a lobbyist. Unfortunately, in this case, his assertions were all too true. As former CIA analyst Kathleen Christison recently observed in the Journal of Palestine Studies: "...The Reagan years have witnessed a marked change in the lobby's influence on policy-making. It in past administrations it was thought to have a major limiting impact on policy formulation, the magnitude of its influence today is so great that it can no longer be considered merely a constraint on policy. Under Reagan, AIPAC bas become a partner in policy-making." She quoted the Middle East analyst to the National Security Council during the Carter admi-nistration, William Quandat, as saying: "We would sometimes goto the Israelis in advance of some fool, quickly began to see action and ask them not to make trouble, but we never went to AIPAC. The Reag tion has elevated AIPAC to the level of a player in its game."

Such acquiescence by Shultz to Israel's desires leaves little room for optimism that this lame duck administration is likely to undertake any serious effort at solving the Arab-Israeli conflict. Beyond that, these next 11 months will almost certainly mark the end of public service for Reagan, at the age of 77, and presumably, Shultz, 67. Why squander their last moments of glory ignomimously drowning in the no-win morass of the Middle East? More cogent is a final and nunerving consideration. Even if Shultz and Reagan wanted to pressure Israel into concessions, the fact is they prohahly don't have enough strength in an election year vis-avis Congress, with its overwhelming pro-Israel bent, or time left in which to do it. The most they would likely accomplish is the last thing in the world they would like to have come about: The exposure for all to see that Washington in the Middle East really is what the Chinese used to accuse it of being - a paper version of that tattoo on Shultz's behind -Middle East International,

Yankee go home

ONE day, and out of the blue, the future democratic state of Palestine will simply and bluntly say: "Yankee go home." The U.S. embassy will be ordered to close down, and sanctious will be imposed against the declining empire of the United States of the same America, on grounds of terrorism it instigated in the 1980s. This is just a wild fantasy of retaliation against the U.S. closure of the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) mission at the United Nations in New York on grounds of terrorism.

The U.S., the terrorist state of Israel's best friend, has continuously injected billions of dollars into Israel's blood, and has constantly supplied highly advanced weapons to murder shreadhomeless men, women and especially children. The Israelis mostly enjoy chasing women and children before shooting them down, cause they are slower runners and easier targets. Those are not my words: I obtained them a few years ago frees a sick-humoured U.S. ex-Marine who fought in Victures. He told me be particularly enjoyed shooting at women and children became they ran slower than the men.

It is time the U.S. learns the true meaning of terrorism before it comes to the rest of the world and preaches against it, and worse yet, takes unjustifiable action against it. The Americans can take action against terrorism once they accept that they are terrorists themselves, and supporters of terrorism. No one has forgotten the bombing of Tripoli that killed innocent civilians, including children, their support of contras who continuously aim at civilia targets, their inaction and refusal to impose sanctions against the medieval racist apartheid government of South Africa, and, of course, their wild support of Israel.

So who is the USA to say that the PLO are terrorists? Since when are terrorists resistance fighters who fight for their mere right of existence? Does this then mean that the resistance movem against the Nazis in occupied Europe can also be termed as terrorism?

Strife-torn Turkish left seeks strong leader

By John Owen-Davies Renter

ANKARA — Torn by dissent and facing a forceful political right, Turkey's once strong left wing is seeking a dynamic leader to take it out of the political wilderness. A crisis in the main opposition Social Democrat Populist Party (SHP) and the resignation of former Premier Bulent Ecevit as head of the Democratic Left Party (DLP) have added to the left wing's woes. But political sources believe the turmoil could lead to a regrouping of democratic leftists into a single cohesive force.

"The left knows it cannot survive unless it joins under a single banner. Ecevit's resignation eases the way. But who will be the leader is an open and tantalising question," one source said. SHP member Deniz Baykal, a

Court case: A trial of the Sadat era?

By Nejla Sammakia The Associated Press

CAIRO, Egypt — Anwar Sadat won the Nobel Peace Prize for his peace agreement with Israel, the admiration of the West for his social and political reforms and a reputation at home as a military

But in the years leading up to his assassination in 1981 by Muslim extremists, many of his subjects turned against him.

The economic policies of those latter years of Sadat's rule were recalled in Egyptian court Saturday, when the former president's family returned for a hearing to determine whether the government can confiscate property the Sadat family acquired through corruption.

Although the case against Sadat's brother Esmat and 10 members of Esmat's immediate family is connected only remotely to the former president, the late president's detractors contend it is the economic policy of the Sadat presidency itself that will be in the dock. They contend that Sadat's open-door approach led

Shortly afterward, Esmat was arrested and tried. He, three sons and seven other family members were convicted of 24 counts of influence peddling, hlack marketeering and hribery, as eager crowds outside the courthouse cheered: "Long live justice."

The family members' property was sequestered, and Esmat and three of his sons served nine months of a one-year prison term. The maximum sentences would have been five years. Infitab throughout the world, all orga-misations and international bodies should act against this American decision which is a dangerous precedent of American hegemony over the international organisation," it said.

The statement noted the U.S. decision came as the Palestinian uprising in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza entered its fourth month, spurring worl-dwide demands for a settlement of the Palestinian problem.

The United States ignored "the international will as expressed through the United Nations acceptance of PLO representation... exploiting its position as the country hosting the international organisation to impose its will without any respect for its charters and statutes."

The OIC denunciation came a few hours after Kuwait branded the U.S. move "a flagrant challenge to the Arab Nation."

The United Nations said the closure breaks the 1947 agreement which established U.N. headquarters in New York and Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar protested to Washington over the move.

The Reagan administration says it opposes the closure move, which was mandated under an "anti-terrorism" law passed by Congress last year.

The official Libyan news agen-cy JANA said Sunday night the call was made in a letter addressed from Libyan Foreign Minister Jadallah Azzouz Al Talhi to Perez de Cuellar.

The letter said the American decision was in defiance of "international will, a lack of respect by the United States to its commitments to the United Nations and a dangerous precedent which could be applied to other U.N.

"This asserts that the United States is not fit anymore to host the United Nations headquarters and the international society should take up its responsibilities and move the United Nations headquarters to a peace loving country," it added.

The amount of monthly aid ranges between JD 50 and JD 85, depending on the social status and other related aspects of the family in question, Allawi said. The fund's list of beneficiaries is updated on a daily basis as more and more Palestinians are killed or wounded each day.

Allawi said the Zakat Fund was also financially supporting those West Bankers and Gazans studying in Jordan's four universities who have lost their sources of income in the occupied ternitories. The fund paid JD 50 each in January to 1,000 students, raising the fund's overall contribution to nearly ID 80,000. Allawi said public contributions collected by the fund fell quite short of the needs and planned allocations. Though affiliated with the Ministry of Awgaf and Islamic Affairs the fund operates independently from the ministry. Its funds are generated from individual contributions in conformity Allawi said that the fund runs affiliated groups in both banks for the collection and distribution of funds. He noted that the ministry spends half of its ID 10 million budget in the West Bank. Abbadi said the committee's activities included individual contributions, public rallies and fund-raising events. He said several private organisations, professional associations and banks had allotted one day, or more, of staff salaries.

The contributions are tax deductible. The JMA alone collected JD 60,000 during the first week of the uprising, creating the nucleus of the committee, which has a 12-member executive committee and a 100-member general assembly, Abbadi said.

The committee's objective is funding humanitarian and medical efforts; it has already paid JD 1,000 to the family of every martyr and JD 200 to every injured Palestinian. Furthermore, the committee has contributed JD 75,000 to West Bank and Gaza hospitals and medical centres, families of detainces and charitable societies, Abbadi, said. The committee is seeking to send 12 ambulances to the occupied territories with the help of various international organisations, be added. The committee is dedicated to maintaining support for the KHARTOUM (Agencles) — Egypt will invite Sudanese government leaders and separatist rebels to a peace conference in Cairo to discuss their four-yearold conflict, a Sudanese newspaper said Monday.

Amai-PSP flare-up

The PSP militia officer was killed Sunday evening in an ambush by militiamen of Justice Minister Nabih Berri's Shi'ite Amal movement in the Rashaya district in the foothills of Mount Hermon in South Lebanon,

The killing sparked a wave of reprisal kidnappings between Amal and the PSP and it took Syrian intervention to defuse the situation, sources quoted by Reuter said.

aged 90, were seized in a counter-abduction. "All 10 were released after Syrian troops deployed in the area to end the dispute," one source said. Amal and the PSP fought fierce street hattles last year in west Beirut over control of the western part of the Lebanese capital. The fighting, in which 237 peo-ple died, was halted when Syria, the main foreign power broker in Lebanon, set 7,000 troops to crack down on militia anarchy and lawlessness.

They said guerrillas of the dissident Fateh movement, backed by Syria, exchanged machinegun fire for 20 minutes Sunday night with rivals loyal to Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) Chairman Arafat's mainstream Fateh. They said the exchanges in the narrow alleys of the camp were triggered by a personal argument among the guerrillas.

Three Lebanese army soldiers and a woman were shot and wounded by a drunken gunman Sunday as they were lunching at a seaside restaurant in the town of Halat, 40 kilometres north of Beirut, police said. It was not known why the gunman started shooting, police said. The assailant ran away after the shooting.

flected PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat's opinion.

— Arah officials also said that the Shultz letter remained vague on the procedure of negotiations. For example, the letter indicates that the prog-ress of Syrian-Israeli negotiations should not affect the prog-

the Israelis and a joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation. In the Arab officials' view, none of the Arab countries should be allowed to sign a final treaty with Israel until progress is made in all hilateral talks. Thus, if Syria agrees with Israel on the future of the Golan Heights it cannot sign an agreement until an agreement is reached between the joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation and the Israelis in a concluding meeting.

The Arab officials said that Arab governments were not opposed to the idea of phasing out a settlement leading to a final comprehensive solution. But they believe the phases should be connected with each other to guarantee that a final settlement is reached and so that the different aspects of conflict are not segmented and fragmented. The Arah fear is that an implementation of one phase without ensuring that it will be followed by the next may lead to partial solution which is rejected by all Arab

Iraqi raids force Tehran to import large amounts of refined oil products

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran has been forced to sharply increase its imports of refined petroleum products, such as kerosene and jet fuel, because Iragi air raids have badly damaged some of its main oil refineries, the Middle East Economic Survey (MEES) reported Monday.

The respected weekly oil industry newsletter said West Germany's Laripax Company char-output of 220,000 barrels a day tered the 284,298-ton Liberian supertanker Patria to carry 1.8 million barrels of gas oil to the Iranian port of Bandar Abbas from Rotterdam.

It said two shipments totalling 900,000 barrels of gas oil were delivered to Iran earlier this

Iran, a major oil producer, has been importing around 300,000 barrels a day of refined products for 18 months because Iraqi air strikes have reduced its refining capacity.

The newsletter said that the big refinery on Tehran's southern

That attack triggered off a re-newed "war of the cities" between the two countries, at war for 71/2 years, with both sides lobbing long-range missiles into each other capitals.

The survey said another refinery in the northwestern city of Tabriz was only working at around half its normal capacity of 80,000 barrels a day.

Iran's orc-war refining capacity of around 1.3 million barrels a day is believed to have been slashed by as much as two-thirds since the war began in September

The big Abadan refinery, with a capacity of 625,000 barrels a day, was knocked out early in the fighting when Iraqi forces in-vaded Iran's oil-rich southwestern Khuzestan province, oil industry sources estimated. Iran's refineries have been repeatedly bombed. The Tehran refinery was working at only 60 per cent of capacity for months before it was repaired shortly before the Feb. 27 raid. The other refineries are at Sbir-az in the south, Bakhtaran in the west, Isfaban in central Iran and Lavan in the southern Gulf. Tehran had to start importing refined products after the Aba-dan refinery was lost. But imports were tripled to around 300,000 barrels a day in late 1986 after a sustained Iraqi air offensive against key indust-rial targets including refineries. It also forced Iran to impose gasoline rationing for the first time. The Iraqi air force bas been concentrating on hitting Iran's oil industry, mainstay of its eco-nomy, and attacking tankers carrying its oil exports, the country's economic lifeline, since 1984.

The newsletter estimated that despite these attacks, Iran is currently estimated to be producing around 1.9 million barrels a day and exporting around 1.5 million barrels a day through the Gulf. Industry sources said that the Iranians are driving to expand their refining capacity. The Isfaban plant has been upgraded to a capacity of 280,000 barrels a day. The Iranians are currently seeking to buy a second-hand refinery and are moving ahead with plans to build new plants at Arak in western Iran and Bandar Abbas on the Gulf coast.

They would have a combined capacity of more than 250,000 barrels a day that would restore Iran's refining self-sufficiency. Iran's domestic consumption is estimated at around 700,000 barter Taha Yassin Ramadan presided over the opening, calling for renewed efforts by producing countries to stabilise the world oil market. Iraq's war-battered economy - like Iran's - is heavily dependent on oil revenue.

Oil prices have sunk as much as $4 below OPEC's fixed reference price of $18 a barrel in recent weeks because of excess supply

Algenia last week said OPEC needed to make fresb output cuts to keep orices from falling further, but Nazer disagreed.

Rumours of an impending OPEC output cut, denied by the group's Vienna headquarters. helped boost prices on the free or spot oil market last week by about $1, which Nazer called a very good sign.

But he appeared to reject any moves that would cut OPEC's share of world oil production to the possible benefit of non-OPEC Saudi Arabia has led a group of OPEC states more concerned with maintaining given output levels than raising prices. Other OPEC states, led by Iran, favour output cuts and higher prices.

OPEC states pumped around 17.3 million harrels per day (b/d) last month, up from January's 16.9 million b/d. No member appears to be violating the quota set for it by last December's OPEC meeting, although Iraq is ing a quota less than that of Iran.

Nazer declined to say what Saudi Arabia, the world's biggest Iraqi First Deputy Prime Minis- oil exporter. might do if prices continued to decline and it was unable to sell at the official OPEC price.

Jordanian industrial companies to back uprising by JD 300,000

AMMAN (J.T.) — The industrial sector is expected to contribute more than JD 300,000 to the Palestinian people in the occu-pied West Bank and Gaza Strip to enbance their uprising and steadfastness against the Israeli occupation. Amman Chamber of Industry President Kbaldoun

Abu Hassan has said. He said that the industrial companies in the Kingdom have so far offered a total of JD 200,000 but much more is expected to be raised in a campaign organised by the chamber for the benefit of the Palestinian cause.

Abu Hassan, who was addressing a meeting organised by the Jordanian National Committee for supporting the Arab people in the occupied lands, said that Arabs under Israeli oppression are setting an example of heroism and defiance in their confrontation with the enemy, and therefore they ought to be supported morally and materially by their brothers in the Arab countries.

JAMPCO starts purchasing potatoes from local farmers

AMMAN (Petra) — The Jordan Agricultural Marketing and Processing Company (JAMPCO) centres in South Shuneh and Wadi Al Yabes bave started purchasing potato crops from local farmers to be marketed in Jordan and abroad, according to JAMPCO Director General Gbazi Abn Hassan.

Abu Hassan was speaking during an inspection tour of the Jordan Valley region where he met with local agricultural officials and discussed with them crop production and government policies and subsidies to encourage output.

JAMPCO is going ahead with export programmes in European markets in implementation of previously concluded contracts and agreements in addition to the fact that the company is making contacts to conclude new cootracts with these countries, Abu Hassan The company, he added, has set specifications for locally produced potatoes, and he called on local farmers to abide by them so as to safeguard their interests.

Some of the potatoes, be noted, are being exported to Saudi Arabia, and it is hoped that other Arab markets will be opened for Jordanian potatoes provided high quality is guaranteed.

Inter: No deal on Madjer

MILAN (R) — Internazionale Milan on Monday denied a newspaper report they had signed Algerian soccer international Rabah Madjer from European Champions Porto.

Corriere Dello Sport said Saturday that officials from both clubs had met Madjer in Spain, where he is on loan to Valencia. and that the 29-year-old striker signed a two-year contract with Inter from next season. "It's absolutely untrue, nothing has been signed and there is no contract," Inter spokesman Valberto Niliani told Reuters. "Porto have told us we can have him. hut we'll have to see. He's just one of several players in Europe we're interested in." Madjer, who played in the 1986 World Cup finals in Mexico, has a preliminary contract to move to West German champions Bayern Munich, who in turn are likely to lose international Lothar Matthaeus to Inter next season.

"We don't want to compromise things with Bayern over Matthaeus for the sake of good relations," Niliani said.

Zola Budd Budd ordered to answer allegations

LONDON (R) — Zola Budd was summoned by British athletics chiefs Monday to answer allegations concerning her links with South Africa.

Tony Ward, the British Amateur Athletie Board spokesman, said a letter had been received from the International Amateur Athletie Federation (IAAF) "requesting answers to further questions regarding allegations of activity by Zola Budd in South Africa in 1987."

Ward said: "We will be seeking answers to these additional questions and we will be speaking to Zola very swiftly."

He said the latest accusations included elaims of "giving and receiving prizes" at a race meeting in South Africa on New Year's Eve 1987.

But he added: "None of the questions from the IAAF concern her racing."

The allegations come amid mounting international pressure for Budd, 21, who was born and raised in South Africa, to be barred from the World Cross-Country Championships in New Zealand on March 26.

Budd, who received British citizenship in 1984 less than two weeks after arriving in England for the first time, has already denied accusations that she took part in a race in South Africa last

Woman conductor cracks male realm

LONDON (R) — A British-music critic once wrote that women were better at conducting buses than orchestras — but that was 40 years before Sian Edwards signed to wield the baton at London's Royal Opera House. When Edwards, 28, conducts at the opera bouse next month, she will become the first women to do so in 250 years of performances at Covent Garden, and one of the youngest conductors in its bistory. Asked about the distant critic's dismissive remarks on the abilities of women conductors, she laughed loudly and said in an interview with Reuters: "Women can run a sympbony orchestra. I'm sure they can do it as well as women bus conductors do their job." The invitation to conduct at Covent Garden should be proof enough she said. And the message is not only directed at men.

Sikh militants kill 15 in Punjab

NEW DELHI (AP) — Sikh extremists killed 15 people, including a family of four, in troubled Punjab state, the United News of India (UNI) reported Monday. The deaths late Sunday and early Monday raised to at least 445 the number of killings blamed on Sikh militants in the state since the start of the year. The latest wave of violence comes as the government of Prime Minister Rajiv Gandbi has been making overtures to Sikh priests and other leaders to encourage them to bring the extremists in line. UNI said Sardul Singh, his wife and tow daughters were fatally shot early Monday in the village of Jhander in Amritsar district. The gunmen burned down the bouse before fleeing, the news agency said. Responsibility for the attack on the Sikh family was claimed by the Bhindranwale Tiger Force, one of more than a dozen underground radical groups operating in the state. Eight other people were killed in Amritsar district, including four Hindus killed in the village of Dallin, UNI said. A retired Sikh police constable, identified as Gajjan Singh, was shot and killed in Ludhiana district, and two Hindu men were pulled out of a truck and gunned down in Jalandhar district, the news agency said.

2,250 desertions reported in Sri Lanka

COLOMBO (R) — An independent newspaper reported Monday that nearly 2,250 security men, mostly soldiers, have deserted their posts since last year and joined an extremist Sinhalese organisation. The Island newspaper quoted unidentified senior security officers as saying that the deserters have become members of the hit squads of the ultra-nationalist People's Liberation Front. The Front has claimed more than 150 lives, mostly of government supporters and politicians, since an India-Sri Lanka peace accord was signed last July to grant more autonomy to minority Tamils. The Front opposes the accord and has vowed to kill those who support it. A spokesman of the government's military Joint Operations Command, commenting on the report, said there had been some desertions from the armed forces "like anywhere else in the world." He said it would not be possible to give an exact figure.

Carter: Democrats have 'excellent chance'

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Former U.S. President Jimmy Carter promised support Sunday for a drive to eradicate guinea worm, a debilitating parasite that permanently disables 12,000 Nigerians annually, by 1995. Carter also said Sunday at a news conference that Democrats have an "excellent chance" to win November's U.S. presidential election because of Ronald Reagan's unpopular policies in Central America and South Africa. Carter said "two-thirds of the American people disapprove of aid to the contras," referring to U.S.-backed rebels fighting Nicaragua's government. American voters wanted to see the United States adopt tougher economic sanctions against South Africa, and supported the holding of an international peace conference on the Middle East conflict, Carter added. Carter, who arrived Sunday on an overnight visit to this West African nation, pledged the support of Global 2000, a private, non-profit institution founded during his 1977-81 presidency.
